

Application and Origination

The best way to improve certain steps within your workflow is to eliminate them altogether—especially when it comes to rekeying data. The less time spent on entering data means more time spent on service and one-on-one support.

Wolters Kluwer Financial Services' ARTA® Application Module streamlines your loan process. Information is flowed from your Credit Applications directly into lending documents in the ARTA Lending Documentation System or the Rembrandt® Lending System. Data is collected one time for Credit Application processing and loan origination documentation to save you time and effort.

Key Content Highlights

- Creates Credit Application and related documents for consumer, commercial, business, and real estate loans
- Retains applicant information, income, and asset/liability information for various uses, including loan documentation and reporting
- Uses the same calculations engine as ARTA Lending and Rembrandt Lending. Perform what-if scenarios for calculating loan payments and provide borrowers with a higher level of service
- Creates dynamically driven documents that include only the information needed for that specific application

Key Features and Functions

- Presents only the data fields needed to collect the necessary information for the specific application type, saving data entry time
- Allows changes to be made easily throughout the process—for example, if a borrower comes in for a second mortgage and decides on a home equity loan instead, you can make the adjustments without starting over
- Take applications remotely and feed the application information into your ARTA Lending or Rembrandt Lending systems
